LOCATION

Dunfermline, the ancient capital of Scotland, was awarded official city status in May 2022 as part of the Civic Honours Competition celebrating Queen Elizabeth II's Platinum Jubilee. The honour was formally conferred by King Charles III at a ceremony in Dunfermline City Chambers on 3 October 2022.

As a former Royal Burgh, Dunfermline has considerable historic and cultural significance. It is the final resting place of King Robert the Bruce, with attractions including Carnegie's Birthplace Museum, Dunfermline Abbey and Abbot House reflecting the city's rich heritage. Alongside its historic character, Dunfermline has developed into a modern and thriving city, offering a wide range of retail, leisure, social and educational facilities.

Located approximately five miles from the Forth Bridges, Dunfermline is a popular commuter location for Edinburgh and the wider Central Belt. The city benefits from excellent road links via the M90, providing direct access to Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee, with convenient connections towards Stirling, Glasgow and the west.

Dunfermline is also well served by public transport, with regular rail services to Edinburgh and connections to other parts of the UK, together with local and national bus services. Park-and-ride facilities are available at Halbeath and Inverkeithing, further enhancing the city's accessibility.
